

Essay Writing - the thesis statement

Name:

Date:

The thesis statement

The thesis statement is probably the most important sentence in your paper!

It is a concise sentence that summarizes the central point of your essay or paper. It typically appears near the end of the introduction. Its purpose is to guide the reader by clearly stating the main idea that the paper will explore or argue.

Remember to:

- keep it concise
- make it contentious: don't state a fact everyone knows, make a claim that makes further evidence and analysis necessary.
- make it coherent: everything mentioned in the thesis statement should be supported and explained in the main body.

The Formula for a Thesis Statement

[Main Topic/Issue] + [Your Specific Argument/Position] + [Reasoning or Supporting Points]

Drag the words into the correct panels.

A _____ is a crucial element of any _____ or _____. It serves as the central _____ or _____ that the writer intends to make and is typically found at the end of the _____. Writing a strong thesis statement is essential for setting the _____ and _____ of the paper. Here are some tips on how to write an effective thesis statement.

Firstly, it is important to understand the _____ of the thesis statement. It should be _____ and _____, providing a clear indication of the writer's _____ on the topic. The thesis statement should also be _____, meaning that it should be open to _____ and not simply a statement of fact.

To begin writing a thesis statement, start by _____ ideas and conducting _____ on the topic. This will help to narrow down the _____ and determine the main points that will be discussed in the paper. Once the main points have been identified, the writer can then formulate a thesis statement that encapsulates these points.

It is also important to consider the _____ when writing a thesis statement. The statement should be written in a way that is _____ and _____ to the intended audience. Avoid using _____ or _____ language that may be confusing to the reader.

Finally, it is important to _____ and _____ the thesis statement as the paper develops. The statement should be flexible enough to accommodate any changes or new information that may arise during the writing process. In conclusion, writing a thesis statement requires careful _____ and _____. It should be specific, arguable, and tailored to the audience. By following these tips, writers can craft a strong thesis statement that will provide a solid foundation for their research paper or essay.

introduction, direction, focus, audience, jargon, accessible, consideration, tone, brainstorming, understandable, refine, research paper, revise, claim, debate, thesis statement, focused, stance, planning, purpose, argument, specific, research, essay, technical, arguable

Thesis statement

Select the correct answer.

Which of the following thesis statements best addresses the ethical implications of self-driving cars?

- The implementation of self-driving cars raises significant ethical concerns regarding privacy, safety, and accountability that must be carefully considered.
- Self-driving cars are unethical because they take away jobs from hard-working taxi drivers.

What is a well-developed thesis statement regarding the impact of self-driving cars on traffic congestion?

- The integration of self-driving cars has the potential to alleviate traffic congestion by optimizing traffic flow and reducing human error.
- Self-driving cars will not have any impact on traffic congestion because people will still own the same number of cars.

Which thesis statement effectively argues for the economic benefits of self-driving cars?

- The adoption of self-driving cars could lead to significant economic advantages by reducing transportation costs and increasing productivity.
- Self-driving cars are too expensive and will only be accessible to the wealthy, increasing economic inequality.

What is a strong thesis statement that addresses the environmental impact of self-driving cars?

- Self-driving cars will have no effect on the environment because they use the same amount of fuel as regular cars.
- Self-driving cars have the potential to benefit the environment by optimizing fuel efficiency and reducing overall emissions.

Which thesis statement best captures the potential influence of self-driving cars on urban planning?

- Self-driving cars will make urban planning more complicated because they require special infrastructure.
- The rise of self-driving cars presents an opportunity to rethink urban planning, with possibilities for more pedestrian-friendly cities and reduced reliance on personal vehicles.

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- Too broad: Attempting to cover too much ground in one thesis.
- Too vague: Not clearly stating your position or claim.
- Not arguable: Making a statement that is simply a fact or generally accepted truth.
- Too complex: Overloading the thesis with multiple ideas or unclear wording.

Write your own thesis statement

Notes for my thesis statement...
