

Transitive and intransitive verbs

Name:

Date:

Transitive and intransitive verbs

Transitive verbs

What do they do?

They act on something or someone.

Example: 'She opened the door.' The verb 'opened' needs an object (the door) to make sense.

Remember Transitive verbs need an object to complete their mission.

Intransitive verbs

What do they do?

They stand alone, without needing an object.

Example: 'He danced.' No object needed. The verb 'danced' is happy just being itself.

Remember intransitive verbs don't need a sidekick (an object).

Some verbs play both sides!

Example: 'The dog eats.' and 'The dog eats food.' Both work!

Look at the verbs in the table.

Transitive Verbs	Intransitive Verbs
Study	Arrive
Complete	Sleep
Discuss	Graduate
Read	Play
Answer	Listen
Write	Participate
Submit	Laugh
Present	Wait
Explain	Run
Revise	Sit

Think of 5 more transitive and 5 more intransitive words. Write them down.

Another example of an intransitive verb is...

Select the correct answer.

Which of the following sentences contains a transitive verb?

- He slept peacefully. She read the book. They laughed at the joke.
 The dog barked loudly.

What is the function of a transitive verb in a sentence?

- To link the subject to the object. To show action without an object.

In the sentence 'The cat sleeps on the mat', what type of verb is 'sleeps'?

- Intransitive Transitive

Which of the following is an example of an intransitive verb?

- Grow Throw Examine Discuss

How can you tell if a verb is transitive?

- It does not require an object to complete its meaning.
 It requires an object to complete its meaning.

In the sentence 'She sings beautifully', what type of verb is 'sings'?

- Intransitive Transitive

What is a key difference between transitive and intransitive verbs?

- Intransitive verbs cannot take a direct object.
 Transitive verbs can be used without a subject.

Which sentence contains an intransitive verb?

- She spoke softly. I wrote a letter. They fixed the car. He kicked the ball.

Mark all transitive verbs

The library is a place where people read books and study for exams. Librarians answer questions and help patrons find resources. Visitors submit requests for specific materials. Students often complete assignments and revise papers in a quiet environment. Some individuals present research findings to their peers. Others explain complex topics to their study groups. Patrons write essays and discuss ideas with each other. The library provides a space for learning and personal growth.